Intuit launched AutoCAD in 1983 as its first integrated commercial CAD application, which included tools for 2D drafting, 3D modeling, drawing, and animation. Intuit provided AutoCAD as an add-on to Quicken, its financial accounting software product, which was available in time for Christmas of that year. With the release of AutoCAD in 1983, Intuit was already a leader in financial software (accounting, bookkeeping, and payroll), and the company's first attempt at a drafting product was initially met with poor sales. Intuit decided to place this product into the smaller business market, placing it in the minority when it came to financial software. Intuit didn't expect any significant growth in this market, and instead expected the product to stay in the small business arena. The AutoCAD product was made available only for the Apple II series of personal computers, but by 1985 Intuit was selling the product for an entire price range of personal computers from the Apple II through the Apple Macintosh, including the IBM PC and the Tandy CoCo system. Intuit published a smaller version of AutoCAD, AutoCAD 102, which was introduced in 1985 as an add-on to Quicken Business Accounting. In 1985, the first year of publication of a revised version of the AutoCAD program, the basic version of the software sold for $395.00. The software quickly became a popular program among small businesses, and sales increased each year. By 1986, sales of the product exceeded the original forecast of one million copies, and by 1990 the program had shipped more than two million copies. The software was always supported by Intuit, but it became a program that was solely owned by Intuit. Subsequently, the company made available support for AutoCAD in exchange for a fee, something Intuit charged from day one for this product. In 1991, AutoCAD went to the web, in order to provide users with the ability to design on a Windows-based personal computer. In addition to designing, AutoCAD became capable of viewing and editing drawings, and was able to automatically synchronize information from one of its three network servers with other users' drawings. Since its introduction on the Web, AutoCAD's popularity has increased greatly. In November 1997, AutoCAD LT was released, in order to allow small businesses to use the same program that was available to Intuit employees. For this

It is a summit that will bring together leaders from ASEAN and China, including Vietnam and Brunei, as well as the leaders of the world's top eight economies: the United States, Britain, France, Germany, Japan, Italy, Canada and India. Vietnam is one of China's key economic partners. Both countries are members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the China-ASEAN trade volume this year is expected to hit $100 billion. Last week, Chinese President Xi Jinping and Vietnamese President Tran Dai Quang signed four memoranda of understanding on agriculture, customs, diplomacy and culture, further strengthening their ties. Speaking at the summit, Phuc said that ASEAN and China had signed a preliminary deal to develop the Mekong-Lancang gas pipeline. The two sides will also focus on economic co-operation and signed three memoranda of understanding. According to Phuc, there are 29 projects with a total investment of $15 billion in the ASEAN-China Free Trade Agreement (ACFTA) region, and over $100 billion worth of investment in ASEAN. He also said that trade between Vietnam and China has reached an approximate figure of US$100 billion. In 2012, ASEAN and China, with 14 members, signed the ACFTA. It provides a framework for an FTA between the two parties. The document seeks to liberalise trade in goods and services among the members by eliminating tariff barriers, adjusting non-tariff barriers and provisions to make sure products of the two parties can enter each other's markets. The document was a milestone in implementing the ASEAN-China Free Trade Agreement (ACFTA). "This year, the two sides inked four memoranda of understanding, bringing the total number to 21. The first is the MoU on investment and economic and technical cooperation in energy and mineral resources in an aim to develop energy-saving, carbon-free, and green energy in ASEAN and China. The second is the agreement on the establishment of a centre of integrated circuit design and production, which will boost cooperation in ca3bfb1094
