Sabres spent much of the offseason looking to upgrade their perimeter shooting and work ethic. They made an outside run at another shooter (the lack of which was a big reason they couldn't really compete in the last round of the playoffs) and hired Mike Babcock to implement his teaching methods. While both might lead to gradual improvements on the team's part, the only real option that opens up offensively is to play faster — a scary idea for a team that's been notoriously slow at moving the puck. When the Sabres get a puck to the wing, they tend to favor a long cross-ice pass rather than trying to get the puck out quickly and then shooting down low. So, they're going to try to be a faster team, and it's not as though they haven't tried that before. In fact, the team was doing it even with John Scott around. Unfortunately, they either didn't do it consistently enough, or else found that without a full-time power-play quarterback to skate through the neutral zone and exit the zone quickly, it didn't work. Regardless, the bottom line is that it's no longer an option. The recent development with Christian Ehrhoff is promising — he looks healthier, stronger, and more aggressive in terms of jumping on pucks (he had three goals in two games against the Jets). It's one of the reasons why the Sabres should be able to utilize Evan Rodrigues on the second line more; he's shown similar results against both the Jets and Blackhawks. With the power play, Jordan Samuels-Thomas showed some good hustle and a willingness to go into the dirty

"Tarnished for iOS"

"Tarnished for android"

Just wondering if this is connected to the 3.0.8 beta release? I just want to know. I'm hoping to see if the patch notes have anything else about their issues, it seems quite a few have been fixed.1. Field of the Invention The present invention pertains to fluid filters, and in particular pertains to fluid filters having a pre-filter which may be efficiently and quickly employed to quickly remove contaminants from the influent fluid stream prior to passing the fluid stream through the filter itself. 2. Description of the Prior Art Various types of filters for filtering the influent fluid stream into the associated process fluids have been employed for many years. Typically filters have been constructed of a ceramic material, and may be said to be in the "ceramic" filter type. These filters have certain advantages, especially where the desired purity or flammability of the desired processed fluid product is not critical. These filters are capable of filtering along the full range of contaminants present in the influent fluid, to thereby assure that there will be no impairment of the desired product purity or its flammability by contaminants flowing through the filter. However, the ceramic filters have a significant drawback, namely, that they are expensive to manufacture, and especially costly to fabric
