Character creation consists of 7 actions (Jump, Walk, Look around, Attack, Use Spell/Magic, Equip Weapon/Armor, and Consumable/Item Use) on a grid representing the human body. You can freely assign actions and actions' types to each character as you wish. The game world consists of an open map containing dungeons. You have the choice of going directly to a dungeon with which you are familiar, or selecting one at random. You can travel and engage in battle with characters you have visited before, and can enter a dungeon in which there are no other characters or monsters around. Characters (NPCs) that you meet in the world will tell you that there is someone in the dungeon. In dungeons, bosses and other difficult monsters roam around, and what is good for you is the most challenging situation for your character. You can enter the dungeon freely, or you can gather money or items necessary for your combat from the NPC shop in the dungeon. You can equip items and spells. You can equip items that give your character a boost or boost your attack power. You can also equip items that boost damage. You can equip swords, bows, and other weapons. You can also equip armor and boots that protect you from the elements. You can use items and spells. The magic of your class allows you to use spells, and the number of magic points you have determines the spell's effect. You can use magic in various situations. For example, activating the magic of the Fighter class allows you to use some of its magic at will, and activating the magic of the Wizard class gives you access to the full power of the class. You can grow your character's strength and skills. As your character grows in muscle strength and number of skills, you can use the character's powers more often.
