Overview of the Game

The Last One is a puzzler game in which players take turns making as long a chain as possible by forming of lines of balls.

The object of the game is to score as many points as possible before your opponent. The normal thinking process of the players is to keep up with the chain made by the other players and either try to score points, or try to keep your opponent from doing so.

The game is played on a 5 different screen playing area. Each screen can only be entered via a specific gate. At the start of the game (and before each round), each player gets a number of playing balls on their scoring rack. Using these balls, and the screen layout, players are able to create as many lines of balls as possible. Each line lasts for several rounds, and the player gets points for each line that is successful.

In addition to the 5 screen playing area, each screen has it's own rainbow-colored flag which can be entered and exited with the left and right arrow keys. The player must sit on a stress cord secured to a harness that hangs from the ceiling. The stress cord is only active while the player is entering or exiting a screen. Any accidental motion will end your turn. A comma button allows for pausing and resuming a turn.
