TeamViewer is an easy to use and intuitive application that lets you control and connect to remote computers. In the same way that you can access your own computer over the Internet, you can access the computers of friends and family over the network. The program lets you access the computer's desktop remotely, share your files, view images, edit the desktop, play multimedia and do much more. You can also access the computer remotely and control the user's keyboard and mouse and run any application that is installed on the remote computer. TeamViewer offers many connection and control protocols, making it easier than ever to connect to remote computers over the Internet. The transmission type can be set to automatic, using the default settings or select the desired protocol at the time of connection. TeamViewer lets you connect to up to 5 remote computers and lets you save them in your Computers and Contacts list for the ease of future connections. You can also manage the computers you connect to remotely by viewing the System tray icon for the remote computer, seeing the security state of the computer, finding out your contact details for remote access, configuring the connection settings, changing the remote resolution, toggling full-screen and customizing the desktop or changing the desktops.
