It can not only mount all popular CD/Â .Q: How to get all the way down to the date in SQL with PostgreSQL I'm using PostgreSQL 9.3 We have a database which has a table that contains start and end dates. When I run a query to bring back the records that have a start time, for the corresponding end time, it works well. However, what I'd like is the dates of all of the start dates. So far, I've just figured out how to only get the date of the first record of each individual search. Is there a way to get the dates of the other records (so I could use a window function) or should I break down the query a different way? The example query is below: select (end_date-start_date) as duration, start_date from charlie_time_table where start_time=1 and end_time=4 A: What you need is a GROUP BY, to group by start_date instead. And you need to add DISTINCT for the duplicate results for each distinct start_date. select start_date, count(distinct end_date) from charlie_time_table where start_time=1 and end_time=4 group by start_date Q: How do I tell if a WSP version has been deployed and if so, what is it? I am trying to detect when a WSP version has been deployed to a site. The script I am writing is deployed to a web app that is part of an ECM site (this is a CMS). I want to determine if the WSP version I am checking has been deployed before trying to load a custom solution into it. My first thought was to iterate through the site (since my script is a web part) and check it's GUID. This was a dead end, because I can't guarantee that the GUID value will be the same in production or test environments. I could check the RootWeb property, but the GUID is derived from the site web that the script is on. How can I tell if a version of a WSP has been deployed? A: There are two ways of
