"There are lots of archenemy cosplayers, and if you make it on the show, you can actually probably get a book deal or something like that. We're not going to have another arc on the show where you say one thing and then the show's called off, like, "I'm going to do that" and then it's sort of canceled." "I think a great way for us to really work on our skills is to work with people who are masters in the craft, and actually learn from them. I think we've done that. We've done it with Shane, with Chris Shore, with everyone who's on the show. We've actually had our education from these larger players. I like the idea of doing something creative. I like having to use what's already in my head, which you can't really do when you're doing something that's pre-designed and somebody's not holding your hand." "To go from just having a really big budget like we had in the
