if i click run the it dont show in Process Properties A: It is not available in Windows 10 and can be found only in Windows 7 at the time I'm writing this. "Measuring" is the process of identifying and capturing a set of details, metrics, or metrics in a person-centered workflow as a means to keep you informed of problem or metrics. Usually used for these purposes is our side of discussion: "The upper limit" and "The lower limit" are settings of your trigger with two separate limits being an upper limit and a lower limit. The upper and lower limits can be adjustable. Example: If I have an upper limit of 192 and a lower limit of 160, the sensor will be able to trigger if its voltage is higher than 192 or lower than 160. Higher than should be here because the default one is already 192 - then I have to choose 16 units to be the lower limit; since the default is 160, I have to set the upper limit at 16. Lower than may not be needed but that's how you set it. For more info check Please make sure you upgrade to the latest FX, because Houdini 17.6.256 have SideFX Houdini 16 as a requirement. If you are upgrading from FX 14.9.251 onwards, you already have SideFX Houdini 17.5.233 as a requirement. If you have nothing to do, just copy SideFX Houdini FX 17.5.233 to SideFX Houdini 18.0.287 (Make sure you have all DLLs in the correct folder as we added some new DLLs for SideFX FX 18.0.287). Then it will show up in Process Properties: I would suggest you to use HoudiniEsq to manage your workflow. If you are not familiar with it, read my post to know more about it. It is a program that lets you manage your projects and it also can manage your work in a side-by-side manner. I have many word pros who use it to improve and manage their workflow.
