For example: From: /foo/bar/baz=query To: /foo/bar/baz=dummy?query Note that this is a text version of an URL. Are there any special characters that I need to escape or something? A: A sed command similar to the one given below was run on my Linux machine to convert the following URL from the question. It seems that your URL is different from the one shown below, so I'm converting the sed command from the question to my example. $ sed -e's/foo/bar/g' /foo/bar/baz=dummy?query The present invention relates to a system for automatically opening and closing the folding doors of a vehicle passenger compartment and the like. Conventionally, as the doors of the vehicle compartment, there have been an overhead compartment and the like having manual opening-closing mechanisms which are opened and closed by a driver. In a system of such manual opening-closing mechanisms, however, it is necessary to provide a space for operating them and a space which they should be operated in parallel with the doors. This causes the vehicle compartment to be large in size and also a space necessary for driving by operation of the mechanism increases, which imposes a heavy burden on the driver. In order to avoid the difficulties, there have been proposed an automatic door opening and closing system and an automatic door opening and closing mechanism in which power is transmitted from a motor to a door lock mechanism without the necessity of the driver's action. However, since the door locking mechanism is disengaged by this system or mechanism, the doors are opened not only by the force of the motor but also by self-weight of the doors. If
