Gallery Search Remember: if you want to use the cracked version of the software, you must provide the author of the software with a working keygen. Once you see the window asking for your key, enter any key (you will enter the same key in the Crack Program). Save the key and download the cracked version of the program. The download is usually smaller than the original version and is named after the activation key you entered before, for example: I entered "Crack Server" and it downloaded: Actual Size: 23.7 MB (243132437 bytes) Original Version: 36.4 MB (368026481 bytes)A view of the condominium hall where David Cressy was found dead Sunday. (Colin Perkel/Canadian Press) The wife of a financier who died while vacationing in a Toronto condo has denied any involvement in his death. David Cressy, 69, was found dead in his home on Saturday. He'd been dead for several hours before a woman who lives in the condo used a security fob to open the door. His wife, Catherine, told CBC News that she had no idea what caused her husband to die. She says she'll never know. She says her husband had been on vacation, not in Toronto. "For me, it's like it's somebody else's life. To have to carry that burden by myself... I cannot, I absolutely cannot talk about it, because I don't know if it was something I did, something he did, something somebody else did. I can't even think about it. That's why I want the person or persons, if there are any, to come forward," she told CBC News. She was referring to whoever killed Cressy. An autopsy has been performed on Cressy but the medical examiner's report won't be available for another seven days, Toronto Police said. Taken to hospital in critical condition It's been reported that Cressy's heart stopped beating shortly after he died. However, Dr. Lisa Cuddy, the chief coroner for Ontario, told The Canadian Press that an examination of Cressy's body was completed by the time he died. The chief coroner's office did not specify when the examination took place. However, a subsequent autopsy was carried out on Sunday. Cressy and Catherine had been staying at a condo in Toronto
