A 32-year-old male was admitted to our hospital for investigation of epigastralgia. With a preoperative diagnosis of carcinomatous peritonitis, partial resection of the stomach and partial resection of the ascending colon was performed. The postoperative histological examination revealed a stomach adenocarcinoma, and our patient was diagnosed as having gastric cancer. Right hepatectomy was also performed. As the tumor marker CA 19-9 rose to 27.5 U/ml, a gastric cancer recurred 15 months after the operation. At that time, ascitic fluid was scanty and there was no peritonitis. Arteriography showed that no tumor cells were found in the peritoneum and the right hepatic vein. On the basis of these findings, the patient was diagnosed as having metastatic peritoneal carcinomatosis and right hepatic vein invasion. The ascitic fluid PH was elevated to 6.9. These findings suggest that the ascitic fluid PH increased under the influence of hydrostatic pressure due to metastatic peritoneal carcinomatosis. Furthermore, the ascitic fluid PH may be considered to reflect both the peritoneal fluid pH and cytological findings of the peritoneal fluid.Q: How to set up codeigniter with ssl?
