A: $translate; Try this January 24, 2017 | By MHM On 30th of October, Hue announced that the pre-registration for Blockchain Game titled "Guardian of Guardian" has closed. Hue first announced its Blockchain Game Guard "Guardian of Guardian" on its official website. Soon after its announcement, the pre-registration for the game has taken place and has now closed. The total number of pre-registered users is 119,900 with a maximum of 6,000 spaces for each platform, meaning 6,000 players will be able to participate in the game. For those who have not pre-registered, you can still add your name to the pre-registration list that will be available on the same website. The game starts on March 2, 2017 and lasts for 10 days, in which, 1 hundred "Guardian of Guardians" will compete in the winner's tournament. You can register for "Guardian of Guardian" by clicking here. The role of ion channels in pain-related behaviours. Over the past several years, several studies have identified the role of Na(+) and Ca(2+) ion channels in nociception. In the central nervous system (CNS), Na(+) channels are important in generating the action potential of the soma and its conduction to the terminals of the primary afferent nerve. As the soma voltage potential fluctuates, the transmembrane potential of the nerve terminal is correspondingly modified. A rapid and relatively slow conductive pathway regulates the terminal potential at the nerve fibre-to-soma voltage potential difference. The slow conduction pathway is mediated by Ca(2+) channels and the rapid conduction pathway is mediated by Na(+) channels. Subsequently, several articles reported that Na(+) and Ca(2+) ion channels also have important roles in peripherally generated pain, which may be related to mechanical, thermal, or inflammatory nociception. In this review, we discuss the recent advances in the roles of ion channels in pain-related behaviours. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to an apparatus and method for recording and reproducing information in and from a recording medium, and more particularly to an apparatus and method for recording and reproducing information in and from a recording medium which can stably record and reproduce audio information to and from an optical recording medium even in a magnetic field. 2. Description of the Background Art Optical recording media are mostly used for recording information in and reproducing the information from audio and video signals and are also used for recording and reproducing information in and from computers. However, optical recording media are not yet fully developed and presently have the problems of low reliability against environmental conditions such as dust, humidity, and pressure. To eliminate these problems, magneto-optic recording media are recently developed to replace the optical recording media. FIG. 1 is a diagram illustrating the construction of a conventional magneto-optic apparatus. Referring to FIG. 1, reference numerals 1 and 3 represent a magneto-optic signal recording medium and a magnetic field application head, respectively.

Han harastado precisamente en el lemu r del Periquillo Sarniento la relaci on y el techo cortesano de los quatro principales. Resumen el libro periquillo sarniento por capitulos, Cultural heroes triptych viva jasper, Heijmans in steel accordion case a.'Army of One' Gives Joy to Wounded Soldier's Family LEBANON, Pa. (AP) — Army Pvt. Michael Gleason and his family wore their Love You More shirts while visiting one of Michael's favorite spots.

They pulled out a container of ice cream and some chocolate chip cookies to share. Michael, who has been confined to a wheelchair since he was injured in an improvised explosive device blast in Afghanistan in 2008, and his family, traveled from their home in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, to a remote area about 20 miles from where he was deployed. They had only planned to visit for about an hour. That was enough. "There was no point in staying down there," said Laurie Gleason, Michael's mother. "It was just peace. It was part of the healing process." Michael called his mother after the couple finished their walk, saying he wanted to come home. An Army spokeswoman has said Michael's mother called an Army doctor in early January and asked for help with him staying in the military after he was wounded. The spokesman, Army Maj. Natalie R. Byerly, said Michael is being processed for discharge. Michael's father, Steve Gleason, said he hadn't talked to his son since before Christmas, but when he did, he told him he was being discharged from the Army. "He said he just felt like they were trying to cut him out, like he was an isolated, wounded soldier and not part of the Army,” Steve Gleason said. He said he doesn’t understand why the family was not notified more quickly about the discharge.

He said his son has a lot of support from the family, including four other brothers and a sister, and the family is grateful to anyone who would bring out the kindness of strangers. “We’ve been walking for about an hour and a half, and it was only an hour, but it was more than what I wanted to do,” Laurie Gleason said. “It was a gift.” _____
