a bad idle is a symptom of several problems and may indicate air in the fuel line, a faulty carburetor, a poorly tuned mixture or an inefficient gasket. the only way to properly diagnose an idle problem is to burn down one cylinder and look at the idle airflow into that cylinder. it may be too rich, too lean, or (usually a combination of both.) the only way to really find the problem is to get it down at the idle speed. when you do, you will either find it or eliminate it. if you have exhaust leaking at the crack or through it, then you may have blown a head gasket or cracked a head, or worn out a piston ring or piston. it is possible that the head valve does not seal the head properly and the oil on the valve will drip on the combustion chamber causing the oil to break out of the ring. sometimes the head needs to be removed to find out what is going on and what you need to replace. check the compression with a gauge and a compression gauge at the same time. the degree of overlap on the compression gauge will give you an idea of how well the spark plugs fire. any more than 1/2" gap on the compression and the plugs are burning lean, too lean for peak torque. a good compression check will also show you the condition of the rings. if there are gaps anywhere along the surface of the rings, the ring pack could be compromised or in need of replacement. what happens, if you are not able to control your budget? it comes to your mind that you could spend it all and your credit will be gone. what you can do is to get the support of quicken deluxe crack serial number.
