

The purpose of a WinUSB device is to enable Windows to load Winusb.sys as the device's function driver without a custom INF file. For a WinUSB device, you are not required to distribute INF files for your device, making the driver installation process simple for end users. Conversely, if you need to provide a custom INF, you should not define your device as a WinUSB device and specify the hardware ID of the device in the INF. If you are still having problems after trying the troubleshooting tools provided by Windows, you can use a third-party software and driver update tool to help fix these issues. One such software is CalComp Recover. It can repair your data by installing and launching components that you may have manually installed or installed by software drivers. Lexmark products use industry-standard encryption techniques to help keep your private information secure. The operating system encrypts information whenever it is stored on your computer, and when you are printing or scanning confidential information, your device encrypts the information it sends to the printer or scanner. Lexmark supplies drivers for many Lexmark product platforms, including color and monochrome printers and multifunction devices with color and monochrome capabilities. You can install the drivers from the Lexmark web site, from the support site, or via the support site. Lexmark continues to enhance the products it designs to meet the changing needs of consumers. With Lexmark products, you can be assured of great performance and reliability from your printer, copier, multifunction device and MFP. These products have become the best in their class, and the combination of their great performance and reliability is undeniable.
