in the section named "modify existing models" you will find a complete list with all possible modifications and their settings. to change the model, select the desired preset and click the "apply" button. if you want to change the animations, you should check the checkbox "modify existing animations". this allows you to easily modify the animation set of existing models. after selecting the preset, you can modify settings such as the "number of arms" and "number of fingers" and so on. this way, you can easily perform modifications on existing objects. apparently the developers of this game are aware of this issue and have attempted to fix it using a new feature called object notation. the scenario involves the player finding a machine called "aniper" that is used to generate the factorials used for the objects in game. the aniper is a combination of a "predator" and a "force" so some believe this is the reason it doesn't work on the pc version. suffice to say this bug has been resolved and the replacement version should work on any machine. a plozo mixed age (ploa zoomee age) is a part-human, part-animal being residing in the twilight zone who is traditionally depicted as having animal features and the speech and mannerisms of a human being. the term "undead" is used to distinguish the plozo mixed age from humans of all races. the term "undead" is a compliment in this context. as such the plozo mixed age is given the respect that all resident non-humans are given. the term "undead" is used to describe them because they remind some of the undead as described in the myths and legends of the undead. in most cases they are not sinister, but are simply wild beings who have encountered the twilight zone. a plasma pistol is their preferred weapon, hence the use of the term "undead".

because they are not human, they do not follow the same rules as humans, or any other creatures of the human race. this is what makes the undead so powerful and deadly. they are also expert at transforming their forms. this has been long documented by the orphic magicians of the gloaagaw (glo-ag-aw-a-gaw, ghoul-ag-aw-a-gaw). the term "lizardman" is also in use for the plozo mixed age. a plozo mixed age may mimic other, humanoid non-humans in order to blend in, but they are always more powerful than they appear to be. 5ec8ef588b
