8. you can now import a video dvd recording file into mediamonkey and edit it like any other video file. for more information on how to import video dvd movie files, please see the sections on using vhs to dvd 8.0 deluxe in this chapter. 3. with your video dvd movie file selected, press the play button or right-click it, and choose the play option. 5. after the file starts playing, you will see the corresponding timeline if your mediamonkey is set to show timelines. 5 a typical timeline window will look something like this:

now you can take that old videotape, which was originally stored on vhs tape, and use the inbuilt video capture feature to convert it to a format which is compatible with the newer digital media devices such as apple's ipods, and apple tv, and the likes. now you can watch your favourite videos without the need of a tape rewind function. this is ideal for transferring your content between video devices.

you can view the original and converted video files using the included video viewer software. however, there are two options to choose from. if you prefer to use your original format of the video to avoid any loss of quality, you can select that. otherwise, you can select either the mpeg-2 or the mpeg-4 format, which offers the best quality possible for the files.

now if you do not want to convert the video file, you can leave that option as is. all you need to do is select the files that you wish to convert and click on the convert button. the product is very easy to use. all you need to do is click the simple start button to begin the conversion process. let me show you how it works. you will notice a screen appears with a default image. if you wish to customize it, simply click the add photo button, browse to the image file that you wish to use for your background and click on the ok button. you then have the option to select an output file format by clicking on the format button. you can select from three different file formats. my personal preference is the cda version, as i believe it gives the best quality. you can change the video and audio resolution by clicking the options button. you can input a size of the output file by clicking on the size tab. press the ok button to start the conversion process. 5ec8ef588b
