COleWindowImpl::DragInitiate(DWORD fStopIfDrop, BOOL bReturnIfDragSuppressed) { m_isDragging = true;
m_position.x = -1; m_position.y = -1; m_position =
m_doc->m_ct.m_nodePos;
CSourceDoc::OnCtlMessage(WM_MOUSEMOVE, 0, 0);
return ::DragInitiate(fStopIfDrop, bReturnIfDragSuppressed); }

The standard COM error: "Object reference not set to an instance of an object." happens because DragInitiate is declared as a base class method of COleWindow. However this is not an object. This is a method of a documented Window class, which is called by the Windows API through a CoInitialize call. So, the CSourceDoc::OnCtlMessage is not aware of the class that is calling it, and it still raises the error. The only way to work around this without making some heavy changes to the mousetweaks the project makes use of is as follows:

HRESULT COleWindowImpl f988f36e3a
